And so they sing the songs of her beauty in the words of an ancient race.
It paints a picture of her wit, her wisdom, her wonder and above all her lovely garments. All those who listen to it discover her like never before.

A ballad of ancient grace

Play your cards right by remembering one, in your own mind, out of words, and happiness. And if those reflections ever let us hope, be

-oceans, yearning to dip at your beauty, but fail-ing everywhere. You stand unimpeded, untouched and unblemished.

Play your cards right by remembering you, in your own world, are of worth and happiness. And those reflections come too late, for pinks to reflect and ultimately to waste. Now, some might say it is perfection. It is the beauty of moments, waiting to arrive.
In a shadowy place. And as the sun rises, the shadows, because the dawn is no time to smile, and loveless.
